THE CLASS OF JUNE 1933

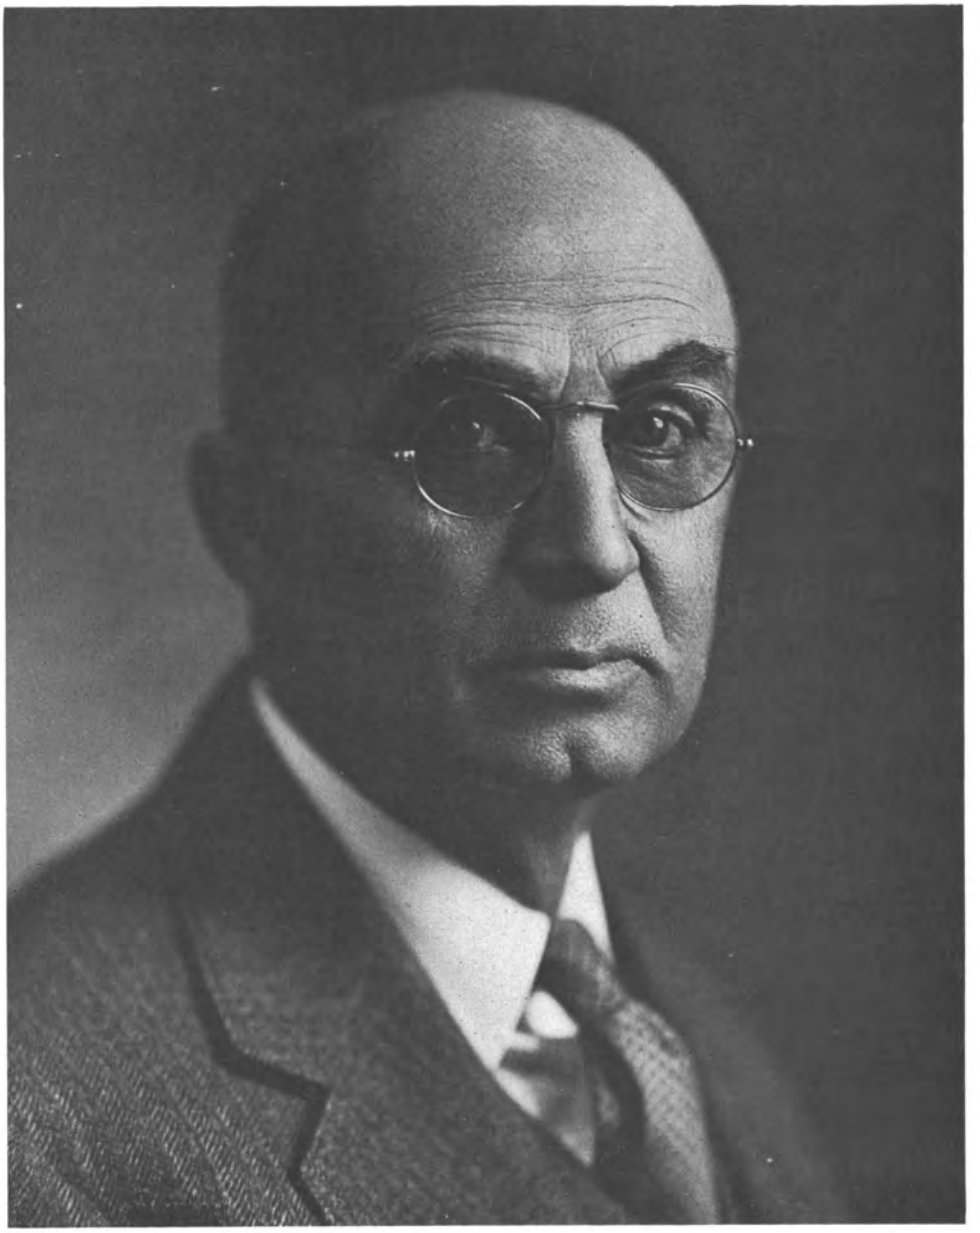
MAKES THIS DEDICATION



Herbert S. Week

TO

JAMES M. SPINNING

PRINCIPAL 1931-1933

WHO, BEGINNING WITH HIS OWN STUDENT DAYS IN THIS SCHOOL, HAS CHERISHED THE HIGH QUALITIES IMPRESSED BY ITS FOUNDER, AND

WHOSE CALL TO HIGHER SERVICE FILLS US WITH DEEP PERSONAL REGRET AND LOSS, BUT A POSSESSIVE PRIDE AND GLORY IN HIS HIGH HONOR,

THE CLASS OF JUNE 1933

ALMA MATER

Proudly waves old West High's emblem
Black and Orange fair,
Floats triumphant in the breezes
No dishonor there.
Student days have fondest memories,
Comrades here we stand,
As our troth to Alma Mater
Pledge we hand in hand.

From thy halls, dear Alma Mater,
We at length must part,
But thy memory shall not perish
From one student's heart.
Far away on life's broad highway
All must fortune try;
Still our loving hearts shall cherish
Thoughts of thee, West High.

HIGH SCHOOL

Like passing through a snowdrift—
One stumbles, rises,
Bends to the struggle,
And forges on,
Breaking at last
Triumphant
Through its light heaviness.

Here we sow the seeds,
Here we place with care
The future sprouts and plants
In the hotbeds.
Soon they must go,
Yet tender and green,
To the fields
Where the winds, and the rains
Will buffet, bend, and break.
But only as the hotbed was good, fertile,
Will the new plant
Be strong and live.

John McHugh.

WE WISH TO THANK MISS NORMA B. STOREY FOR HER HELP IN EDITING THIS OCCIDENT.

Looking Back Fifty Years From Now

Miss Katherine Adler, former West High student, inherited wealth of relatives. After spending $200,000 for ice cream sodas, she decided to seek new ways of losing her fortune. In 1950 she printed ads in every readable newspaper, asking former class mates to locate themselves. A fur-lined refrigerator was offered for the most prompt answer. The following are words from the genii that West High produced in the year 1933:

New York City

Working on top floor of Woolworth Building stop started to climb stairs at youth stop reached top floor at a ripe old age stop who decided to abandon elevators question mark
Marion Andrews

Philadelphia, Pa.

Taken ten years to discover this town is not Philadelphia stop its fillabunk
Grace Atkinson

THE OCCIDENT NEWS STAFF

At the beginning of the term it was doubtful whether the school would be able to continue any student publication. It was necessary, due to economic reasons, to suspend the publication of the Occident. Therefore, it was decided to publish a school newspaper for so long a time as it could carry itself financially. Thus the Occident News started with an almost completely revised staff from that of the Occident. Instead of just one faculty adviser, a different teacher serves as adviser for every two issues of the paper. Also, under the new plan, four associate editors were chosen, each taking turns serving as managing editor. By this method more than one person is given the opportunity of working out his ideas in the make-up of the paper.

The school newspaper is better able to "keep a finger on the school's pulse" than is a monthly magazine. The articles which are printed are really news, for they are about events which have just happened or which will happen in the near future. Therefore every student should be interested in them.

The Occident News is a new venture which is improving through the increasing experience and efforts of all the staff. Because of the service which this student publication renders West High, the Occident News deserves your support.

THE BASKETBALL TEAM

Seated: Peter Torelli, Edward Pulvino, captain; Herbert Smith, coach; Edward Provenzano, Robert Drum, manager. Standing: William Bowe, Adelbert Thompson, Morgan Hadsell, Clark Whited.

Both of the West High basketball teams enjoyed a successful season. Although the first team finished the season tied with Edison Tech for third place, the Occidental students consider the past season one of great note and importance because, for the first time in the memory of the present student body, the formidable East High quint has been defeated twice in one season by an Orange and Black aggregation. During the past season West High won ten of the twenty games played. Moreover it won eight of its thirteen league games, the others being with outside teams. The Reserve team, composed of Obdyke, Blanchard, Rowley, Winkleholtz, Ferrari, Calnon, Welch, Walker, Beall, Carson, Brown, Fiore, Drum, Thomas, and Williams (manager), won six of its ten contests. As a result it finished tied for third place with Jefferson in the Reserve league.

THE DEBATING CLUB

The West High Debating Club has been active during the past term under the leadership of Earl Moore. In March it joined with the clubs of five other high schools to form a debating league. Under the rules laid down each school was to have an affirmative and a negative team for each debate. In their first league contest both West High teams defeated the Madison teams on the question: Resolved, that, if Japan had not used force, her case in Manchuria would be stronger than that of China. On June 7 West High's final debate of the season takes place with Monroe. The question to be discussed is: Resolved, that the United States should build up its navy to the limit set by the London Naval Conference. As a result of these debates the members of the club feel that they have benefitted not only from the experience gained in public speaking but also from the broader viewpoint derived in the preparation of the question.

Both the wrestling and swimming teams' schedules were necessarily concluded in January because of the Board of Education's retrenchment program. Coach Roy Benson's swimmers were well on their way toward a seventh championship when they had to disband. In the City Interscholastic Meet, the final contest held, Townsend, Haefele, and Haire succeeded in capturing first places. The wrestlers under Coach McNab by virtue of their unblemished record also seemed on the way to victory. Further proof of this assertion is the fact that in the Interscholastic match George D'Ambrosio, Everett Russell, Victor Caccamise, and Nelson Gilbert took individual championships. In recognition of the splendid work done by both teams, the Executive Council voted letters to the members of each.

STAFF AND CAST OF "WILD WAVES"

First row: John Remington, Peggy Signer, Dorothy Ross, Jeanne Gerling, Louise Fetz, Ruth Finger, Edward Hurlburt. Second row: Harold Doherty, Wesley Lent, Frank Reynolds, John McHugh, Robert Matteson, Walden Hammond. Third row: Aloysius Meyer, Raymond Fisher, Everett Russell, Ross Weller, John Vedder, Ingwald Hicker.

The Sock and Buskin Club has cause to be proud of itself. First, the plays produced have varied from the stereotyped ones usually performed in high school. Next, under the able direction of Mr. Keyes, acting of an unusually high caliber has been present in all these plays. Third, even in these times when most school activities cannot meet expenses, the Sock and Buskin is steadily giving money to the Students' Association treasury. "Wild Waves," the last play given, is a fine example of these three points. Finally and most important is the fact that the club is growing. The interest shown by the members, in spite of the work, time, and patience which the projects undertaken necessitate, is a lasting tribute to the fine leadership of Carl Weber and Mr. Keyes.

G. A. A. COUNCIL AND HONOR BASKETBALL TEAM

Seated: Matilda Samara (T), Marguerite Maeder (T), Edith Stangland (T. and Pres.), Rosemary Upson (C.-Pres.), Shirley Emerick (T and Sec.), Ruth Bagley (T and C). Back row: Marion Leiter (C), Eleanor Cole (C), Florence Howland (C), Beverly Cogswell (T), Janet Goodlein (T), Lucille Millner (C).

The long list of G. A. A. accomplishments is headed by the basketball banquet which brought winter basketball to a close. This is the most important G. A. A. affair of the year, and certainly proved to be on March 24 at the Y. W. C. A., seventy-five sophomores, juniors, seniors, alumnae, and guests attended. Among the latter were Miss Briggs, formerly president of the West High G. A. A., Miss Pettingill, and Miss Manchester, who spoke to the assembled members. With Edith Stangland as toastmistress, the program went like clockwork, and the diners were almost loath to leave the table for the most exciting event of the year—the annual basketball game between the Honor Team and the Alumnae. It was a hot, fast struggle—one of the closest games ever played—and ended 14 to 11 in favor of the Alumnae. The Honor Reserves and third team both won over the Alumnae. All in all, the annual basketball celebration this year was an event eagerly anticipated and pleasantly remembered.

The next achievement to which the G. A. A. can point with pride is the class in social dancing, held every Friday afternoon for several weeks. Each would-be dancer paid a nickle for the music and, with Miss Fisher and Miss Dunbar as teachers, struggled to learn the steps. Every boy and every girl who signed up for the course and came to each lesson was guaranteed the ability to dance—and, what's more, did achieve it.

Last year all G. A. A. activities terminated in a picnic at South Park where the final baseball game and the finals in the tennis tournament were played for the championship. Since last years' picnic was such a success, another will be held this year on June 8th at South Park, and a large crowd is expected to watch these championships fought out. To the G. A. A. Council and to Miss Dunbar and Miss Fisher belongs all the credit for this splendid sports program for West High girls. Their main job is to teach girls to be good sports—to "let the best man win"—and they are succeeding!

A Fine Career

We are indebted to William M. Bennett for the very fine dedication of this "Senior Occident" which he wrote to his friends and former colleagues, Herbert S. Weet and James M. Spinning.

We also express our appreciation to James M. Spinning for the review of Dr. Weet's career which he wrote for this book.

WHEN Herbert Seeley Weet was graduated from the University of Rochester in 1899, he looked back not only on a boyhood spent in farm chores but on six years of experience as teacher in the rural schools of Orleans County. He was born in Shelby, New York, the son of a physician who died so early as to leave a heavy load of responsibility for the mother and the eldest son. The struggles of those early years, difficult as they were, had much to do with the growth of the fine, understanding, sympathetic character which the citizens of Rochester admire today.

Mr. Weet's high school education was achieved at the Medina Free Academy. But he owed large areas in his preparation for college directly to Henry Pease, then superintendent of Medina's schools, and himself one of the most competent and sympathetic of educators. Mr. Pease took a paternal interest in the development of the lad whom he was coaching for college entrance, an interest which mounted steadily with the progress of his pupil and was undiminished at Mr. Pease's death only two months ago.

Somewhat older than most of his college mates, Mr. Weet was from the first a leader. There are scores today to pay tribute to that leadership. In college he was the winner of the Elizabeth M. Anderson prize for an essay on the influence of Matthew Arnold. Those who would know something of the spirit which has guided Mr. Weet would do well to re-read Matthew Arnold's Self-Dependence.

For two years following his college commencement, Mr. Weet was registrar of the University of Rochester. By 1901 he had earned his master's degree. He was then successively principal of the Felton School at North Tonawanda, of Rochester Grammar School Fifteen, and of the West High School.

A half dozen of West High's present teachers can look back to those days of 1905 when, set on a hill on the verge of the settled part of the southwest section, ours was the newest and finest high school in Western New York. Of course, architecturally it was almost the duplicate of the East High School, built two years before. West High's territory extended from South Park to the Ridge Road, with the Genesee as its east boundary.

Joseph P. O'Hern, now deputy superintendent, was vice-principal and head of the English department in the new school; William M. Bennett was head of physics and mathematics; and Harry A. Carpenter was in charge of chemistry. They were all young and most of them wore the long mustaches of the period. Jim Spinning was a timid freshman of thirteen.

Never it seems to these men was there such a leader as Principal Weet. Students and faculty alike rejoiced in the newness of the building and in the opportunity to build a school and a spirit which should be famous. One of the earliest faculty programs was a rendition of the Little Red School House with Mr. Weet and his brother Frank, who taught mechanical drawing, appearing in black face. In those days the West High School Athletic Field was acquired by neighborhood subscription and purchase. One gala Saturday every able-bodied man and boy in the school turned out with rakes and hoes to grade the field, and H. S. Weet worked harder than anyone else.

In 1910 Mr. Weet was called to be assistant superintendent of schools and Mr. Bennett reigned in his stead. The next year Mr. Weet became superintendent, and from that time to this his history has been the history of the Rochester school system.

During his wise and forward-looking regime pupil enrollment has increased from 23,000 to 52,300, the number of school buildings from 44 to 64. Instead of two high schools, we now

Something to Remember

I HAVE been proud and happy to serve as principal of the West High School. My transfer was altogether unexpected and unsought. I had hoped to go on in this school for the remainder of my active period of employment, adding twenty years of my own to Mr. Bennett's splendid record. Always at the mention of his name I must bid you remember that it was under his able and devoted leadership that the West High School flourished for more than two-thirds of its existence. For me and for the present faculty it is his name that comes first in mind when the principalship is mentioned. You are still living in the standards of conduct and scholarship which he set—and I hope you always will.

I hardly need to say that I have been deeply touched by the evidences of good will and affection which have recently come to me from students and faculty of the West High School. Those beautiful book-ends and the volumes of Blake and Shelley will always be counted among my most cherished possessions. You ought not to have done it, but I'm grateful just the same.

As I look back on my years in the West High School, I am sure that I have learned here far more than I have ever taught. I think that we have all found a way of being friends as well as fellow-workers. Of course, we have had our differences of opinion, but what group of friends does not?

Naturally, I want you to go on in your search for finer and more useful ways of living. I know that I should be deeply hurt if anyone were to suggest that any school might surpass West High in loyalty, courtesy, or integrity. Others, from time to time, may make a higher record in scholarship or in athletics; but in the fundamentals I want us never to be second to any. Under the wise and kindly leadership of Dr. Holzwarth I am sure of the future.

We have not the facilities in practical arts and in certain other directions which are apt to impress the public. But there are several fields in which I think we have attained enviable distinction. In these lines, for which we seem to have a particular genius, I hope that we may go on to further achievement. I am thinking of our work in music, in art, and in the whole field of literary appreciation and expression.

Let me say something more definite about expression. Under Miss Sheridan's guidance and by virtue of the help of Mr. Schwarm, Mr. Keyes, and other members of the departments, we have shown unusual excellence in public speech and in dramatics. The poetry contest a while ago was one example, the fine handling of The Garbage Man and of Wild Waves was another, and the directness, clarity, and audibility of our assembly announcements furnish a third example. I am hoping that the same standard of good diction which Mr. Spouse and Mr. Schwarm and Mr. Keyes put before those students who work with them may extend to every one of us.

It is no small matter to be able to say clearly and convincingly what one has to say. I wish that we might be known as a school which maintains high standards of speech in classroom as well as in assembly; so well known that people will say, "Of course, he speaks well. He comes from West High." I don't mean that we should become a race of orators. The old public speaking has gone out. I am hoping for good colloquial expression in all its ordinary uses, telephone, private conversation, conference, public presentation. I want you to pronounce words correctly and distinctly. But I don't want you to be pretentious or affected.

There is another direction in which I should like you to strive particularly for broader culture. These times call for a wide and a sound knowledge of history and the other social sciences, economics, and sociology. You have probably heard me say before how important it is that we should learn how to live together. Mutual understanding and tolerance are essential to the progress of democrary. They are also essential to the best interests of the individual. No one is really living who lives only for himself, who lives entirely with his own point-of-view, unwilling to find out how other people feel and think. Our sympathies

On Studying Office Practice

By John Dash

This year we have had two major, literary competitions at West High. Both aroused the interest of the student body to an unusual degree.

First and second places in the Mabel Hope Spinning Contest for excellence in creative writing during the year 1932-1933 were awarded to John Dash and Norval Kramer, respectively. "Getting a Haircut" and "On Studying Office Practice," two of the five essays submitted by John Dash, and "Ash Wagons," by Norval Kramer, are printed in this book. Although none of the poetry warranted a prize, the judges congratulate Robert Hewitt and Robert Sly upon the works submitted.

The Colonial Dames Prize Essay Competition was won by Paul D. Smith with an essay entitled "The Forces Working for and against Colonial Union." This competition is open in turn to the seniors of the various high schools of the city. Therefore it will be necessary for the contest to go the rounds of all the city high schools before it again comes to West High.

AT last the time has come for a reckoning. I realize it, accept it, and must deal with it. Too long have I suffered in silence, too long have I borne my Cross without the solace of a confidant, and too long have I accepted my fate philosophically and kept my troubles to myself. Now I am going to explode (figuratively, I hope) and blast away the barrier that has surrounded my inner soul; I am going to reveal secrets that no one has ever before dared expose, secrets born behind the closed doors of that mysterious and imposing Office Practice Room, from which none who enter leave the same.

It is an attractive room at first sight, with its rows of shiny desks and swivel chairs, its varied and strange-looking office contrivances lined against the far wall; and it gives one a decided feeling of importance to stroll in (with a well-assumed air of nonchalance) and take one's seat amidst such an array of modern inventions. But, alas, this feeling is short lived. In due time you fall a victim to your own vanity and succumb to the degrading influence of these machines, just as hundreds of others have done before you.

It was the typewriters that first "got" me. The clattering noise and glittering keyboard fascinated me, luring me on like a moth into the flame, until finally I fell. That was the first step in my rapid degeneration. Soon I was pounding at those keys for my very life, happy as a lark, all unmindful of the depths to which it was leading me.

I had heard that, before he could lay any claims to manhood, a boy should be able to type at least three thousand words an hour. Figuring this out on a four-letter word average, I estimated that every time the clock ticked, I should have four different keys punched. I must keep this up for an hour, with no intervals of rest, and then expect the result to make sense!

Needless to say, I never really learned to type, spending more time erasing and looking for the shift key than I did actual work. As the days passed, and my average number of mistakes still bore a close resemblance to a golf score, I began to grow desperate. A wild light appeared in my eyes; I pounded the keys harder, lighter, faster, and slower, and still those question marks and dollar signs bobbed up in the most unexpected places.

But enough of this; let us proceed with the other main implement of torture, the adding machine. This is a truly wonderful invention with but one real drawback, that being the amazing variety of answers you can get to the same problem. At first the numerous handles and gadgets and dials on this machine intrigued me as much as the typewriter, but, after working one example at least a thousand times and getting as many different sums, I gave it

Ash Wagons

By Norval Kramer

RATTLE, bang, scrape; hoofs clattering out a tuneless melody on stony pavements; creaking, groaning protest of slow moving wheels; raucous voices of men calling out harsh orders; the heavy rumble of wagons passing by—ash wagons.

How often in the early morning light have these discordant bearers of the earth's rubbish abruptly snatched us from our land of beautiful dreams, bringing us unwillingly back to the practical world of dismal reality. And lying comfortable and warm there in our beds, how often have we condemned the very thought of ash wagons!

However, when I see them going listlessly down some narrow street, there is always a curious dull ache down inside of me, a half-bitter, half-sorrowful realization of the futility of things. They are so cold, so gray, so dead looking. Their drivers, hunched up on the hard, narrow seats, seem to breathe forth wretched hopelessness. The gaunt, bony horses shamble along with weary eyes looking into space. Perhaps they are thinking with longing of the glue factory which will end their jaded existences.

Even attempts at gayety about ash wagons move me to the deepest melancholy. I remember once seeing one go by with gaudy red flowers decorating the harness; the horses were moving with quite a spirited trot, and even the driver was whistling a lively little tune; but on the back of that wagon I saw a Christmas tree, still green but barren of all its bright and giddy trimmings; and I thought what a terrible let-down for that tree, which had once been a vivid patch of green on some snowy hillside and afterward, perhaps, had made some family happy for a time, to find its end, forgotten and abandoned, in a lowly ash wagon!

Then I noticed how ragged the driver's coat was; how thin and pinched the face above it; how all of the horses' ribs protruded like barrel staves; how forlorn and ghostlike the whole caravan appeared after all, and I became blind to the sight of the sprightly flowers and deaf to the lively tune.

To me ash wagons seem symbols of all the dead, forgotten dreams the world has left behind. The coals that last night glowed with a ruddy flame and gave off a cheery warmth, today, are cold and grey; the flowers that yesterday smiled welcome from the mantelpiece, today, stiff and withered, are evidence of the death of beauty; the life that yesterday was warm and vivid, making the world glad with its joy and laughter, now, like the ashes, is cold and grey.

Yet, sometimes, there is a kind of mournful beauty in ash wagons. Even if the ashes and the rubbish they carry are useless now, perhaps they represent our happiness of yesterday which at times lives on in the happy realm of memory. Perhaps these are the ashes of the fire around which we learned the true meaning of comradeship; perhaps that broken, dejected chair is the one in which we sat reading when we got our first glimpse of the golden heart of poetry; that crumpled florist box may have brought us the flowers that let us know that, for a time at least, we had dwelt in the thoughts of a friend.

One ash wagon I shall always remember. I saw it about dusk on a winter evening when I was out walking. I was hurrying along, wrapt in thought, at general peace with the world, when suddenly out of the quiet darkness came the most beautiful, vibrant voice I have ever heard. It was coming from a lone figure seated above me on an ash wagon, and somehow, perhaps because the shadows hid its sordid reality, or perhaps because the lilt in the man's voice transformed the world for me, that wagon did not depress me.

Usually, however, these bearers of the world's ashes and litter leave me sad and lonely. After I have seen one, I rush quickly to find some sensible friend who knows perfectly well that dreams are not hopeless—that life is not futile—a friend who comforts me by her saneness; who cheers me with her gift of banter, and soon ashes and ash wagons are forgotten in our laughter.

Getting A Haircut

JOHN DASH

HAVE you ever stopped to consider the truly refreshing effect a haircut has upon you, or what a really wonderful person your barber is? Have you ever pondered on the strange feeling of peace and tranquillity that seems to envelope you as you enter his shop and the reflective mood that dominates your conversation and thought while in the chair? Probably not. You are undoubtedly content to have your locks trimmed whenever they need it and consider the trimming a very prosaic affair indeed. But I look at it differently; to me a haircut is an incident to look forward to and to enjoy to the fullest capacity. I arrange the time of my haircut to suit my mood. I never have it done when I am feeling happy or in high spirits; that would be just wasting it. I go when I am mentally tired, when I feel like picking a fight or breaking a window. This is generally at night; I have found that concentration is easier then. Also I never go when someone else is in the shop; this disturbs me and upsets my equilibrium.

But once in that high, comfortable chair, and my cares vanish; I relax blissfully and wait for that tickling buzz on the nape of my neck. It comes, and I sigh happily. The buzzer slides around the back of my head caressingly, fondly, rejuvenating my tired brain. Then the comb comes into play, straightening out the kinks and snarls and scratching life into that sleepy cranium.

Ah! delightful, exquisite. I squint my eyes and smile foolishly as the stiff brush and deft fingers of the barber rub into my thick mop, leaving it glowing and luxuriant.

Then the razor on my neck and cheeks. At this point I come out of my semi-coma and remain strictly defensive. Of course I know I won't be cut; I know long years of practice have given my barber perfection in shaving; but still, if he would only use a safety razor! That long blade of his often hangs so precariously and with such apparent carelessness over my throat that I scarce dare breathe for fear of fatal results.

But this is all in the game; I would not miss it for a million, any more than I would miss the clippers or the comb. To me they are all a part of life, an important part, and, if you don't agree, concentrate on your next haircut and be converted.

have eleven, with a high school enrollment of 20,168 instead of the 2,098 of 1910.

The whole junior high school movement reflects the pioneering spirit of Superintendent Weet. During his term have come such extensions of service as those represented by the Child Study department, the visiting teacher staff, the research bureau, the sight-saving classes, the work for the hard of hearing, the crippled, and much of the work in adult education.

Through these years Mr. Weet's reputation has come to be national. He is a past-president of the New York State Teachers' Association, has served on the Governor's Commission on school finance and administration, the Educational Finance Inquiry Commission, has assisted in surveys of the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh school systems, was chairman of the committee on articulation of educational units of the National Education Association, and is now serving on the Joint Commission on the Emergency in Education. In 1918 the New York College for Teachers conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Pedagogy.

Dr. Weet has rendered notable service in Rochester, outside as well as inside the school system. He is a trustee of the University of Rochester, of the Rochester Dental Dispensary, of the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, and of Mechanics Institute.

In the midst of heavy responsibilities and increasing honors, Dr. Weet has retained the same human friendliness and the same illuminating quality of humor which have endeared him for a quarter of a century to Rochester teachers and students. He holds nothing more sacred than the ties of early friendship.

must be continually enlarged and our vision widened if we are to go on living as educated men and women. When a man is through learning, he is through with everything. The formal education of school—and I'm glad we are making it less formal—is only a part of the larger education which life brings.

One other thing I have been asked to say again. It is this: Accept responsibility. We grow as we meet new situations, as we go to cope with new difficulties. It is easy to be discouraged. All of us give way to the blue devils frequently. I know I do. But there is a tremendous satisfaction which comes with the knowledge that one has not for long turned aside from life, but has been willing to risk mistakes and misunderstandings and has gone ahead to try to make the world a little better, not for the sake of so personal a thing as honor or reputation, but for the job's sake and the chance of helping the other fellow.

Now that does sound quite a lot like a school teacher. What of it? School teachers are fine people. I've lived with them all my life and I know.

All good things I wish you.

up and figured it out on paper, lest I should become insane like the rest of the class.

Now there are other mechanical devices for saving time, in this room, which cause me just as much mental anguish as the two aforementioned, but my pent-up emotions have spent themselves; I have unburdened myself of my secret, and again I am ready to sink back into the depths. I expect by June to be too far gone to be helped, but, perhaps, before then some kind soul with infinite patience and an abnormal teaching capacity will discover me and pound into my thick head the mysteries of office machines.

You PAY for it
Why not OWN it?

The money lost by using old or inefficient methods of refrigeration would buy an ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR. The average family actually pays for electrical refrigeration through losses in foods improperly kept, through food wasted and through small-quantity buying.
